

Educating for Global Citizenship

A Faculty Panel with Discussion

November 1st 4:00-5:30,
Memorial Lounge, Waterman

Panel: David Jones, School of Business Administration
Stephanie Seguino, College of Arts and Sciences
Fayneese Miller, College of Education and Social Services
Chris Koliba, College of Agriculture and Life Sciences
Welcome: David Shiman, College of Education and Social Services
Moderator: Richard Johnson III, College of Education and Social Services

"...education is called on to prepare young people for multiple and evolving forms of citizenship, exercised at different levels and across the different dimensions of their lives (ecological, economic, political, social, and cultural). In light of the forces and challenges of globalization, how can education, often used to serve the interest of the global corporate agenda, prepare students to become active global citizens?"

Yvette V. Lapayese

Panel will respond to the following questions:

- What is your conception of global citizenship?
- How do you strive to promote global citizenship in your professional work?
- What needs to be done at UVM to advance global citizenship goals?

REFRESHMENTS WILL BE SERVED

Funding provided by UVM's Office of International Education
For further information, please contact: David Shiman (656-1428) or Richard Johnson III (656-2929)